

Great News!

Jim produced a new version of the Bangladesh documentary which is now approved for you to watch. (The original version was private for security reasons.) You will be so encouraged by the amazing stories of your brothers and sisters who are sharing the gospel in places where the name of Jesus has never been heard.

You can see it now at www.creativeimpactministries.org. Go to the "Missionary Films" tab and then "Bangladesh."

Briefly, these are the stories of 2015:

- COSTA RICA: The Hubbard family traverse the mountain jungles to bring Good News of freedom to a tribe who have been captive to fear of spirits and false gods.
- BANGLADESH: Hundred's of disciples, pastors and supervisors are trained to plant churches in their own Hindu villages. Persecution and poverty do not rob them of their fire to share Jesus' love. You will fall in love with Pastor Benjamin and his leaders.

Bangladesh: It's one thing to hear about false gods. It's quite another to see people offering bananas to it. (on left)

- WORLD INDIGENOUS MISSIONS: A small, highly-relational missionary organization in Texas are "family" to the missionaries they send. They provide training, administrative help, and loving pastoral care for those they serve. (Still being edited.)
- JAPAN: A break dancer from Honduras marries a single missionary lady and together they (the Alvarados) serve God in creative ways. Some people think that the Japanese are highly resistant to Christianity. They disagree. and they are proving it! (Still being edited.)

- SOUTH CENTRAL MEXICO: Twenty-eight years after being forced out of the remote villages of the High Sierras, this "seventy-something" missionary couple returns to serve the people they love. The Toths help train local pastors to plant new churches in territory that is mostly under the control of drug cartels. (Still being edited.)

S. Central Mexico: "I came around the corner to encounter a road block. They jerked me out of the car, shoved a sawed-off shotgun in my face and threatened to blow my head off." (Dr. Andrew Toth about travel in drug cartel territory.)

Two more stories:

- ALL THOSE PLACES (above): A retired pastor and his wife travel to all these places to film Christ-glorifying stories – stories that might never be told otherwise. They do this work so that believers are motivated to renew their engagement in The Great Commission (Matthew 28:18-20).
- THE USA: Faithful partners pray for that retired pastor & wife – for their health, safety and fruitfulness. Some of them also entrust them with financial support to make it all possible to serve these missionaries at no charge.

That Retired Pastor & Wife: Jim & Lynn Adams in Bangladesh with Pastor Benjamin & Monica, their son Shaon & our friend Jacky.

Thank you!
